- Discussion of sexual relationships includes learning about consent.
- The notion of pleasure is identified as an essential component of a happy adult sexual experience.
- Sex is viewed in the context of a loving, committed relationship.

Success Criteria

- Young people can describe what sex/sexual intercourse can involve.
- Young people can describe what consent is.
- Young people understand the physiological and mental responses in their body when having sex.
- Young people articulate what is important to them before embarking on intimate/sexual relationships.

Resources to support this activity

- Slides/PowerPoint (We are always looking for ways to improve the slides, if you have a suggestion, please let us know using the feedback form on the RSHP site)
- Cycling through Consent: <https://youtu.be/-JwKjRaUaw> (3 minutes 47 seconds)
- Male vs Female orgasm: which is better? <https://youtu.be/5ioQ8a7o3Mo> (3 minutes 59 seconds but can be ended at 3 minutes 24 before further films are promoted)
- Activity/Discussion cards: Having sex for the first time

NOTE: The issue of sexual consent is part of this activity, more in-depth consideration is given to consent at THIRD and SENIOR levels. If young people learning at FOURTH Level have not explored consent, then the THIRD level activities may be appropriate.

Activity

1. Introduce the session along these lines.
 - At 14 or 15 years old many young people are thinking about sex, and thinking about the choices they might make when it comes to relationships and sex.
 - The session today is about sex as part of a relationship – but it is about thinking ahead, its not about saying you need to be in a relationship, nor that a relationship needs to involve sex.
 - When we are thinking ahead, there are a few things that will be covered, share the slide:
Today's session is about: Pressure, Pleasure and First time sex

2. First of all: what is sex? As young people might think that 'sex' is only penetrative penis/vagina sex, use the slide to explain:

The law says that sexual activity includes mutual masturbation, oral sex or penetrative sex. Penetrative sex is when a person puts their finger or penis or something else (like a sex toy/dildo) into a person's vagina or anus (bottom).

Explain that this matters because it influences everything the young people are talking about today. First we will talk about pressure.

3. Pressure. Explain along these lines, using the slide, ask young people: What do you know about consent? Why does it say free and enthusiastic?

Putting pressure on someone to do something sexual is like the opposite of them giving their free and enthusiastic consent.

Watch the animation and discuss what young people understand from it: Cycling through Consent: <https://youtu.be/-JwKjRaUaw> (3 minutes 47 seconds)

4. Pleasure. Share the slide with some introduction along these lines: One thing that makes human beings special is that they have sex for pleasure, they enjoy it. If people want to have pleasure from sex then it needs to be something they both want to do, and they need to be relaxed and happy to be in the moment.

Pleasure: a feeling of happy satisfaction and enjoyment

Acknowledge that pleasure and sex is often associated with having an orgasm, but what is it that happens at this moment? Explain that scientists have worked with animators on this fun short video exploring what happens when we experience pleasure when having sex, including when a person has an orgasm: Male vs Female orgasm: which is better? <https://youtu.be/SioQ8a7o3Mo> (3 minutes 59 seconds but can be ended at 3 minutes 24 before further films are promoted)

5. Pause to review what's been covered so far – what sex is, that pressure is never okay, that consent is essential, that sex is something adults do because it is pleasurable.

- 6. First time sex: a checklist. In this activity ask the young people to consider what needs to be in place before a young person considers having sex with a partner for the first time. So, they are thinking about sex with no pressure, with consent and that will be pleasurable. Explain this could be the first time ever, or the first time with a new partner.

The task is to take the 11 items on cards, work in a 2 or 3 and sort into 2 piles - one is to be 'First time sex: Essential/must have things' and the other is 'First time sex: Important things'. See appendix for teacher's sheet. Clarify that all cards are important, its up to them to decide essential/must have alongside other important things. They can have as many cards as they agree in each pile, no minimum or maximum. After enough time, have feedback and discussion – focus on how young people differentiated, which feel like the most important elements to such a choice and why. Where young people are happy to respond (to general questions rather than personal/targeted questions) you might also ask – What does feeling ready feel like? What does feeling safe feel like? Trust? Etc. Discussion also provides an opportunity to reinforce knowledge of sources of information or contraceptive advice.

Having sex for the first time – a checklist

1. I feel ready.
 2. I feel safe.
 3. I have someone I can speak to about this before I do anything.
 4. We are both 16 years old or older
 5. If we need contraception, it's sorted.
 6. If we need condoms, it's sorted.
 7. We are both sober.
 8. We have the time and we are in a safe comfortable place.
 9. I trust him/her.
 10. I want to.
 11. I know I can change my mind, say 'no' or stop at any time.
- 7. Discussion/debate. Introduce young people to the idea that for many people sex should only be part of a relationship where people are committed to each other, perhaps in marriage. Ask them to work with a partner/in a 3 to decide what they think. If they have a strong view one way or the other they can report this back, if they think different things they can report back points where they agree and disagree with the statement. Use the slide as a prompt. After some time explore the range of views.

Sex should be part of a relationship where people are committed to each other, perhaps in marriage. What do you think?
